

BIN ENDS & ODDMENTS

Summer 2018

ARGENTINA

The Bosca is probably getting a bit long in the tooth, priced accordingly. If it doesn't fire in the glass, it will make great Coq au Vin. The Desierto is fine, Pinot with a Welsh twist?

2012 PINOT NOIR Luigi Bosca, Argentina	3	£14.80	£6.00
2015 PINOT NOIR 'Desierto' Patagonia	11	£18.95	£15.95

CHILE

Pais Salvaje is a curiosity made from vines that had self-seeded and grown amongst the trees at the foot of one of the Bouchon family's vineyards, the grapes picked by ladder. No sulphites. It was light and fun, but I forgot to sell it.

2015 PAIS SALVAJE Bouchon	11	£16.95	£8.00

The Sauvignons do just what it says on the tin. Isabel's PG might be getting old, might be good, likewise the Chardy. The Explorer Pinot is really good, Dog Point even better.

SPAIN

Al Muverdre is Monastrell (Mourvedre) made by genius Rioja winemaker Telmo Rodriguez. Deep, quite firm. Gavilan is serious stuff from a fine Ribera estate, raised in French barriques. Manzanilla sherry is essential, and half bottles are especially useful.

ITALY

Clean, citrus PG from Prima Alta, hazelnutty Vernaccia. Marion's straight Valpol was a bit lean in 2014, their Amarone is the stuff of dreams for those who love silky, velvety, rich and expensive reds. I have drunk the 99 Tignanello, and it is superb.

Francois Sorg is brilliant, I sell lots of his other varietals, but Sylvaner sticks. The 08 PG could be great, the 13 is.

BURGUNDY

The Burgaud Morgon has been hanging around, could go either way, the others will all be lovely. The Arnoux Pinot Fin is a curiosity from a top Vosne estate. Gouge's wines like age, this Nuits should be good.

Gauby is a cult domaine, the wines are dense when young. These have been sitting, but could be fine. Alquier and Jullien are serious, the latter particularly, probably the Languedoc's best producer.

LOIRE*Yannick Amirault is amongst the very best Cabernet-Franc producers anywhere, but 2011 and 13 were challenging vintages. He won't attempt to over-extract, so the wines are fairly light, and lack the normal complexity, but are attractively mature. Pellé is Menetou's top grower, the Clos Blanchais their top wine. Top-flight Loire Sauvignon.*
